Thesis: Site Structure and Organization in Central Alaska: Archaeological Investigations at Gerstle River

This dissertation presents a multi-dimensional analysis of site structure and organization at Gerstle River, a multi-component stratified site in the Tanana Basin, central Alaska. The primary objective is to investigate patterning among the lithics, fauna, features and stratigraphy. The data are explored in terms of technological and spatial organization.

Thesis: Constitutional Change in the Circumpolar Periphery: A Comparative Case Study

This dissertation probes the origins of intercultural conflict and regional disparity in the circumpolar North. The dissertation examines the policies of internal colonialism of the governments of Denmark, the United States and Canada towards Alaska, Greenland and the Yukon, and discusses how those policies have shaped inter-cultural relations and contributed to regional disparities.

Major Professor: Dr. Gerald A. McBeath
