Public service is the application of teaching, research, and other scholarly and creative activity to constituencies outside the University of Alaska Fairbanks. It includes all activities such as extension, outreach, and community engagement. Public service requires competence to these constituencies. It can be instructional, educational, or consultative in nature, and is related to the faculty member's discipline or field of publicly recognized expertise. Public service may be individual, professional contributions to one's discipline, or other activity which advances the goals and mission of the university and its units. Such service may occur on a periodic or limited-term basis. Examples include, but are not limited to:
